

Tell us a little bit about what you are doing now.

I'm an award winning community leader, speaker and writer. Aside from currently studying economics at Warwick, I run programmes for young people and I'm involved in local churches. After leaving sixth form, I worked in HM Treasury as a UK Policy Officer and during my time there I got a scholarship from Credit Suisse that fully funds the degree I'm studying now.

What A Level subjects did you take? Which was your favourite and why?

I studied Chemistry, Maths and Economics. My favourite was Chemistry as it provided a good challenge and forced me to work methodically, which I value highly.

How did Mossbourne Sixth Form help you achieve your goals - academic, sporting, or personal - once you left school?

I had great support from teachers around applications and next steps, as I didn't go to university straight away. Teachers spent lots of time providing me with the resources and networks I needed to enter the world of work. Also, with my projects I had lots of teachers who supported and volunteered on them to make them a success. I appreciate the routine and structure sixth form provided. It helped me develop good habits which have been foundational for my success today.

What's the best piece of advice you ever received at Mossbourne Sixth Form?

My Chemistry teacher Dr Bhachu always used to ask me "Are you working hard, or hardly working?" - this is something I carry with me. It forces you to make the best use of your time.

What's a piece of advice that you would like to give current and future Mossbournians of all ages?

To do the best you can so that you have the most opportunities available to you after. Also, life gets a lot more serious after Mossbourne so try to enjoy your time there as much as possible!
